What's the difference between a brewery, micro-brewery, and brew-pub?

A brewery is a building or establishment for brewing beer or other malt liquors, especially the building where the brewing is done.

A micro-brewery is a brewery producing less than 15,000 barrels per year and usually concentrating on exotic or high quality beer.

A brew-pub is a commercial establishment that brews its own beer for sales on and off the premises and is typically combined with a restaurant.
